DORMANT ROSES FOR FALL PLANTING

FALL is the best time in which to plant Dormant Roses, from about October 20th to November 20th. You then get new plants freshly dug from our fields. In your beds, they will start growing the first days of Spring.

We do not sell any Dormant plants in the Spring, only those which have been "Already Started" by us in pots during the Winter. These will be ready for delivery about the end of April. The price will be 25 cents per plant more than the Dormant price in the Fall.

All our plants are field grown, budded on hardy stock and will flower the first Summer after planting, except the climbers which take an extra year to develop their flowering canes.

Every plant is sent out with a name label on it.

As Roses should be well matured before being dug, the later in the Fall the planting can be deferred, the better. Mulch the ground with leaves, straw or other litter to prevent it from freezing before Roses are received.

We strongly recommend many of the new varieties we have listed as being an improvement in color and habit over the older ones. Fuller descriptions of the different varieties will be found in our last Spring catalogue. If you have mislaid your copy, write for another one.

Up to late in the season there are a number of the best everblooming varieties to be seen in flower in our exhibition beds. Come and see them. It may help you in your selection.
